E-Learning Building Resilience

Course Description

This online self-paced learning experience has been designed for anyone who needs to understand what business continuity (BC) is all about, which is an essential part of building resilience in an organisation.

The course is built on the core principles of the Business Continuity Management (BCM) Lifecycle as described in the Good Practice Guidelines 2013 - a global guide to good practice in the BC discipline.

It contains audio advice from experts and provides answers to common issues faced by those practising BC in any organisation.

Course Objectives

- Describe what business continuity is and why it is important in any organisation.
- How to go about establishing and implementing a BCM programme.
- What actions need to be taken in order to develop and embed business continuity plans that work.

Who Should Attend?

Business Continuity and resilience newcomers or individuals with a full or part time role or responsibility that requires a basic understanding of BC.

Course Delivery

This BCI training course is a self-paced, eLearning training course which takes approximately 8 hours to complete.

At the end of each module there are questions to check that each stage of the BCM Lifecycle is understood.
